

Dearest FCC,

We all know that the airwaves are owned not by the corporations, but by the people of this country. The FCC was setup to protect the interests of the citizens. Media consolidation has threatened those interests. Sinclair Broadcasting's decision to force their stations to air an anti-Kerry documentary days before the election is a clear example of the dangers of consolidation.

Sinclair uses the public airwaves free of charge, and is obligated by law to serve the public interest. But when large companies control the airwaves, we get more of what's good for the bottom line and less of what we need for our democracy. Instead of something produced at "News Central" far away, it's more important that we see real people from our own communities and more substantive news about issues that matter.

Sinclair's actions show why we need to strengthen media ownership rules, not weaken them. They show why the license renewal process needs to involve more than a returned postcard.

Sincerely,

Matt Barber

PS Tell Michael Moore he can air his "documentary" right after the Sinclair "documentary"...
